30th Sunday in Ordinary Time

Every year during Lent, a suburban Chicago parish holds a weekend retreat for men. Barely thirty hours in length-from Saturday morning to Sunday afternoon-the retreat helps men deepen their relationship with God, with each other, and with their families. It is a chance to put the world aside for a while and spend time in prayer, reflection and friendship. Yet of nearly 3,000 registered families, on average only about ten men attend the weekend retreat, and often a couple of those men are returning for a second or even third time. How can we find as much time as we need for some of life's most trivial offerings, but can't find thirty hours to devote to God?

In today's Gospel reading from Matthew, the Pharisees were again questioning Jesus' knowledge of the laws of Moses and the Jewish faith. When asked which is the greatest, he responded simply but matter-of-factly that "you shall love the Lord your God with all your heart, all your soul, and all your mind." He then explained that as a natural extension of this greatest of all commandments, we are to love our neighbors as ourselves, meaning no matter who we meet, we are to love them as God loves each of us.

According to the Catechism of the Catholic Church, this love of God and each other is known as the path of charity. Charity is the greatest social commandment. It respects others and their rights. It requires the practice of justice, and it alone makes us capable of justice. Charity inspires a life of self-giving (CCC 1889). When faced with a difficult situation, if we remember the greatest commandment-to love one another-we will find a clear path to resolving the difficulty. ©2008 Liturgical Publications Inc

"Teacher, which commandment in the law is the greatest?" He said to him, "You shall love the Lord, your God, with all your heart, with all your soul, and with all your mind. This is the greatest and the first commandment. The second is like it: You shall love your neighbor as yourself. The whole law and the prophets depend on these two commandments."
 -- Mt. 22:36-40
